

About Patricia

Patricia Petersen holds an MFA in Early Music Performance from Sarah Lawrence College. A Director Emerita of Amherst Early Music, she is a regular faculty member at that and many other weekend and week-long workshops. She currently directs the Mountain Collegium-workshop. She performs on recorder and other early winds, and has appeared with the Charleston Symphony Orchestra. She has coached early music ensembles at Wake Forest University and the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. An ARS certified teacher, she teaches recorder, early music, and English country dance in North Carolina and at workshops around the country. She has a particular passion for complex late-14th-century rhythms and for playing from facsimiles of early 15th-century music. Pat has made 2 CDs, with her vocal ensemble Fortuna and with the Amherst Festival Choir. She serves on the board of the Country Dance and Song Society, and has been known to inflict her banjo-uke playing on unsuspecting old-time jams.

About the Music

Step outside the traditional recorder canon comfort zone and into less-explored traditions of European music.

Enjoy the expertise and guidance of Patricia Petersen as we take the road less traveled, honing our consort playing skills and deepening our appreciation of the incredible variety of music for the recorder.

Low instruments are especially encouraged!

At the Rochester Chapter, we try to arrange workshops that feature intermediate-level music in the morning session, moving on to more difficult pieces in the afternoon.
